Terri says.....

After school I went to Truro College and studied Business, IT, Photography & History. Studying at college was different to school; you have to be more independent and organise yourself, although there is always support if you need it. Since college I have continued to learn while at work and have taken my bookkeeping and accounts exams. I intend to do my AAT (Association of Accounting Technicians) qualifications later on.

At school I was a Senior Prefect and I also took the Sports Leaders award. I think it was important to get involved in things so you can put it on your C.V. but also it develops your character. I love my job as my colleagues are great! I get real satisfaction from balancing the accounts and I also enjoy working with the public and giving good customer service.

...be your own person

University isn't for everyone and you can find other options out there to get where you want to be. Be your own person, get involved in a variety of things to put on your C.V, and choose things you enjoy.
